

Dear C [REDACTED],

Thank you for your letter. How come Brazilians are crazy? There must be something I am missing. I actually don't think of you now especially as Paulistas (rather than Brazilians) I feel you as highly individual people , each person as a sort of universe, each person to be slowly learnt. In this process my missing out to Austria was a serious break, at an unconscious level. There were practical reasons but it was unfortunate.

Sure, you are in the middle of what should be your summer break and coming on this course is quite a time sacrifice. It is about 1/17th of a year.

I hope that over the next few days your thoughts about the history project will firm up and lead to something detailed and concrete. You could hardly be in a better place for this than Canterbury. I'll try and fix you up with some one from the archaeology service.

How far back are you hoping to reach?

Yours,

Mario.
