

Second Thursday

Hello everybody..... yesterday I heard from a colleague that in her main group there was a mellow glow, I think she meant a kind of autumnal feeling. Yuk!

I don't want us to get into mellow glow mood or mode. This course finishes at 3.30 tomorrow and between now and then we have very valuable time, time that is much more valuable than it was in week 1, because of our state of warm-up and the powerful ways in which we have got to know each other

In UK schools they wind down and waste the last week of each summer term. Made me seriously angry as a parent. What a way of sending the kids off on their summer holidays!

I wonder how people evaluate themselves as dreamers
realists
critics.

Some people will find themselves most at ease in the critic state of mind. There are also strong realists who are maybe a bit short on the ability to dream and find it hard to stand outside the whole situation to cast a critical eye over it.

Walt Disney's strength lay in the fact that he was equally strong in all three areas, which in a way makes him the businessman-artist of the 20th century.

We are going to have a look at the Disney strategy right now as you come to the end of this letter.

Warmly yours,

Mario
