Dear Group B'ers,

I am the sort of trainer who needs to open all <sup>the</sup> communication channels he can with participants. More skilled workers do not need to scuffle around for the maximum number of channels.

Do you write letters to your folk on training courses? What is the effect of written communication on the messages you get?

Who knows, you may find letter-writing sometimes useful in the work you do as a mentor. You are introspectively extroverted when you use this medium.

I am struck by the human and work atmosphere in our group. Very ~~sure~~ <sup>aware</sup>, I am, of excellence I sense and then suddenly hear and see.

If you feel like a correspondence, please write back soonest.

Ma

If you are far from the trainer you are "mentoring", why not correspond?
