The warm-up work we are doing is central to the whole week's work. We must achieve trust with each other in order to allow our guests to feel at ease with us, to open up to us. The warm-up will also allow us to go deep into the cultural matters we are dealing with, matters which go well beyond the purely intellectual. As you can easily understand, for example, the UK class system is buried deep inside the Brits and is not some bizarre epiphenomenon. We will look at this in our pm session.

Today we are together all day. No guests. Tomorrow we will look at (a) Univ-life (b) religion in UK. Our informant will be the University Catholic Chaplain.

On Wednesday you will take a train to Faversham, my little town, and spend the day there. Super will be in my home.
