

Dear Every body,

I have found reading your barter slips of paper very interesting. Here is a summary of what the group seemed to want mid-yesterday-morning:

- 7 slips spoke of KNOWING more about Eng culture
- 5 " " " " SEEING/FEELING/EXPERIENCING Eng culture
- 5 " " " " how I can teach culture to my students
- 5 slips spoke of visiting people in their own places (let's see the chimps in the forest, not in the zoo!)
- 9 slips mention language improvement
- 4 slips suggest the importance of our relationship to each other within the group.

It always makes good sense to ask your participants both up front and sideways what their wishes and objectives are. It also makes sense to realise that if a course is half-good such wishes will modify and change.
