

Monday

Dear Everybody,

The two Danish groups who were here last week certainly filled Sally and me with joy and I think many of them had a good time.

I guess some of you already have a good knowledge of these strange, exotic islands, having read deeply and spent some months here. Others may only have visited "The Great Wen" (pustule), London. Is Copenhagen Denmark?

UK is a really odd place and maybe the most bizarre thing is that Brits firmly believe they and their beliefs are normal. Yet, on many spectra the Brits, and more especially the English are extremely near one end of a given spectrum:
eg: they are very concerned with the truth while being excellent, seamless liars

- they live in extreme privacy
- they abandon their old folk to the State
- they work far longer hours than most other

Europeans

- they are full of anger which erupts when they get pissed.

Your thoughts on these strange islanders.
